

“...students, advisors and fellow presenters were visibly shocked to hear [Jessie’s dad] harbored no resentment toward the young man that took [her] life. Instead of hate, [he] spoke with compassion, love and expressed his willingness to forgive ... sincerely encouraging these students to become the leaders that create change throughout the world. I saw 100 students cry, laugh, be inspired, engage in conversation and begin to plan their role in spreading love, not hate.”
